Wall Mural

A storyboard of local Horwich and North Bolton history

A project chronicling almost 800 years of Horwich history, completed by first year sixth form students at Bolton School, has been transformed into a massive mural adorning the walls of our conferencing facilities here at Bolton Arena Sports Village.

1825-1834
Bee Hive Hotel

Did you know?

The Bee Hive which is now a popular pub, is approximately 200 years old!

Did you know?

The first locomotive to emerge from Horwich Loco Works was in 1889 and was one of Sir John Aspinall's Class 5 2-4-2Ts which quickly became known as 'lanky tanks'. The locomotive can be found in York's National Railway Museum today.

Did you know?

The Horwich Loco Works employed more than 5,000 people. And, the works lead Horwich to become one of the six leading railway towns in Great Britain.

1886

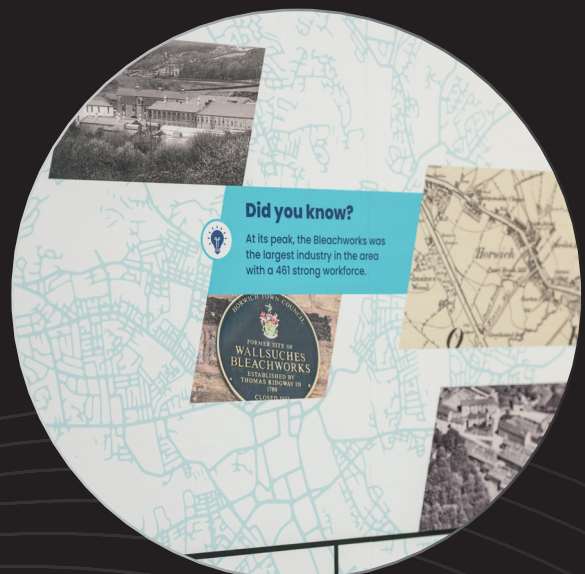

Horwich Loco Works

The epic timeline spans the first documented settlement of 'Horewic' in 1221 up until the construction of the arena and its role in the 2002 Commonwealth Games.

It has been researched and collated by three students from Bolton School's Girls' Division: Alice Nielson, Constance Cowen, Eliza Denson and Thea Littlefair, along with Melissa Wright, Secretary of the Bolton branch of the Historical Association, as part of their active engagement in participating in voluntary endeavours; reflective of the school's ethos to 'make a difference for good.'

The Arena's marketing and signage partner, Cornerstone Design and Marketing based in Oldham, has designed and created the 78ft wide mural that was fitted to one wall that divides into three parts in the Conference Suite.

Using striking graphics, photographs and captions, it charts the 1221 settlement, the establishment of the Blundell Arms in 1715, and the establishment of Horwich Bleachworks in 1780.

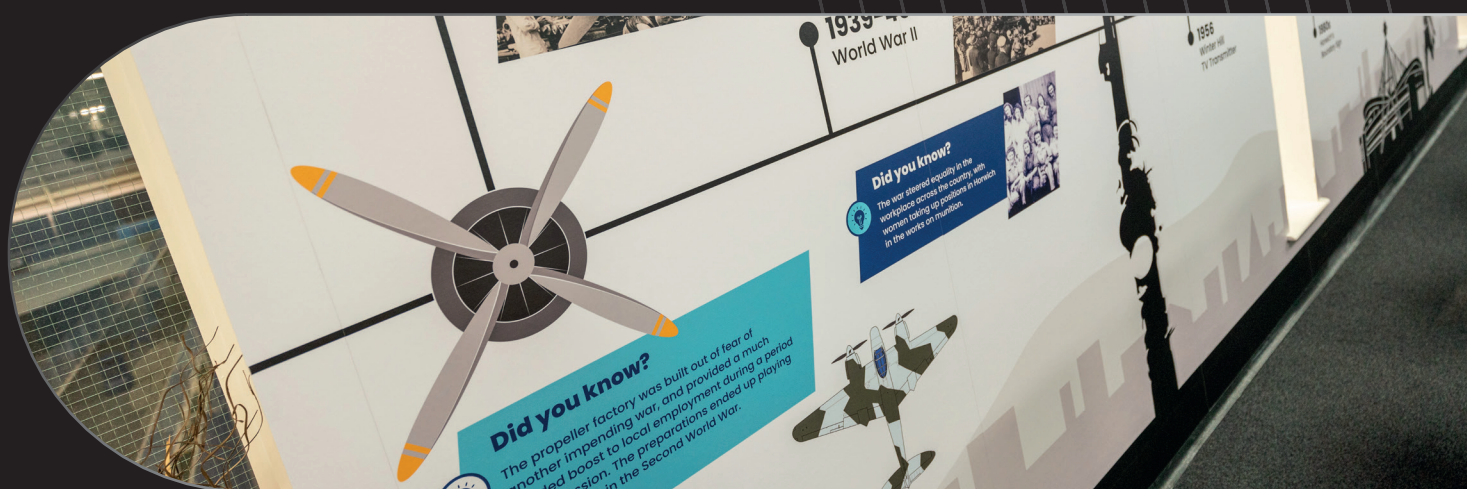

Did you know?

At its peak, the Bleachworks was the largest industry in the area with a 461 strong workforce.

The opening of the De Havilland Propeller factory in 1937 features prominently; the factory providing much needed jobs at the time as fears of war later materialised and women went to work to replace the men fighting at the front.

And there's a place for the Winter Hill TV transmitter, that first came into service on 3rd of May 1956.

The building of the Reebok Stadium in 1997, which replaced Bolton Wanderers' Burnden Park ground, and the construction of the Bolton Arena four years later, finish off the timeline.

Our aim was to do something unique to elevate our conferencing facilities to the next level. When the conferencing space is opened up, it provides a 78ft wall that we felt could be turned into something distinctive and engaging.

Horwich has some great history – something we thought would be important to showcase – so I contacted Mrs Wright, who is part of the Bolton Historical Association, about the idea of having Bolton School students' support, and the project evolved from there. They've done a fantastic piece of work to pull it all together.

Refurbishment

We are extremely proud to have charitable status. This means every penny of our surplus revenue is reinvested into our facilities and activities to enrich our community, by inspiring and encouraging everyone to be active, happy, and healthy in body and mind.

We recently invested £20K on our conferencing refurbishment which covers:

Furniture – Chairs & tables

Wall mural – A storyboard showing the local history of North Bolton and Horwich

Interactive TV screens – For our conference set-up, to improve visitor experience and encourage alternative group engagement within sessions

Welcome screens – Reception screen and Conference Room iPads

Facilities firmly in the digital age

The refurbishment of our conferencing facilities has placed them firmly in the digital age – thanks to the installation of four state-of-the-art, interactive touch screens, conferencing cameras, speakers and iPads.

The 75-inch, 4k fixed touch screens are a web-based, digital solution which allow our conference clients to engage in meaningful visual and audio communications with their audience.

With endless functionality, you can display, write, draw, or split the screens to show different information; screen share; stage group polls; and accommodate external speakers and presentations. The possibilities are endless, and all designed to make your meeting or conference communications slick and seamless.

The iPads can be linked to the touch screens or used in isolation, providing added flexibility and an all-round engaging experience.
